Note: This is a light and fun section, which we occasionally revive for special themed collections. New last week: Hats & Hoods (page 144). Weather Report. We get more than 4,000 a year from around the globe. Nothing about these matters needs a piece of paper — it's all in the spirit. Weather by hour. We have a "cloud" clock in that respects the rising and setting of the sun by tracking the cloud movement from west to east. Or, if you prefer, a "cloud" clock by date. The latest on the weather around the world. The sun is on the rise, and sunrays pierce the sky as a warm, blue-grey veil covers the world. A few hours later, the sun will set and this world will be plunged into the darkness of night. Even the moon follows the sun, when it shines, rising and setting with the sun and disappearing just as it appears. But the moon doesn't set in the south, as can be seen from the observations made in the Americas. There are some day and night clocks. An example from the U.S.A.: a long-case clock with a dial that rotates around the longcase (clock case) for indicating day and night. The day (or night) position of the hand indicates the current time. Once the sun has set, night will begin. The moon will set; the sun will rise; it will still be cold, but a gentle breeze will caress the earth. The hour of the day is indicated in the clock by a large hand, in the upper part of the clock. A second hand, smaller in diameter, indicates the time. The moon is reflected in a mirror, which appears as a small, yellow hand. It tells the time by following the track of the moon throughout the sky. The crystal in the clock is surrounded by small figures. One of these indicates the number of days in a year. A second one indicates the number of months in a year. The clock can be wound by a key at the back. But if the wind key is turned when the time is set to "Night," the figure on the dial will appear without hands. You need to wind the clock once a week to keep it running. And remember to turn off the light when you leave the room. One fine night there are clouds. One of them is in the south, next 82157476af
